Because it was not always possible, based on statute number and narrative description, to determine if a convicted charge definitely met the criteria for submission of a DNA sample, the information in this table also includes charges that could meet the criteria if more information about the charge were available.

Ten people with a total of 12 convicted charges with a disposition type of "Reopen" are also included.

A total of 1,912 people (79.7%) were convicted of at least one charge that definitely met the criteria for submission of a DNA sample; the remaining 486 people were convicted of at least one charge that may have required submission of a DNA sample. A total of 2,648 of the convicted charges (83.3%) definitely met the criteria for submission of a DNA sample, while 529 convicted charges may have met the criteria.
